"We were pleased with the response to Quell at CES. The interest in Quell continues to grow, and there is clearly a need for wearable technology that makes a meaningful and clear difference in people's lives," said Shai N. Gozani, M.D., Ph.D., President and Chief Executive Officer of NeuroMetrix. "In our second year at CES, the transformation of NeuroMetrix into a consumer health technology company is gaining momentum."

Quell is designed for people with a wide range of chronic pain conditions. The latest version of Quell gives users the option to control their therapy via a mobile app and includes several additional enhancements including extended battery life and advanced sleep tracking. It will be available in March 2016.
